ELEVATOR WEIGH-UP PLAN IS ABANDONED

Vancouver Shippers Say the Proposed Action Would Result in Embargo

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 30.—(By Canadian Press.)—Following resolutions of the Merchants' Exchange and many large shippers deprecating the closing of the elevator for the purpose of weighing, growing out of the Van Allen charges, the Royal Grain Inquiry Commission decided here today to abandon the idea.

Within the next ten days twelve ships must be loaded here with approximately 2,395,000 bushels of grain, and 4,000 cars are routed toward this port. This would mean, one of the railway shippers announced, an embargo on the port.

Chief weighmaster J. G. White told the commission the actual weigh-up would come in July and that the weighing of the grain would be done by the elevator company. The weigh-up was to determine the correct figures regarding the Van Allen charges. The 12,000 tons of grain was to be weighed at the elevator in case of receipt.

The terms of the lease, by which the grain elevator company, the company of Edmonton, obtained the right to use the elevator for weighing, was investigated today. The charges were $25,000 and the right to use the elevator was to be paid in $10,000 with no provision for a return of the elevator.

The Pacific Construction Co., which owned the elevator, was to be paid $10,000 for the use of the elevator. The company was to be paid $10,000 for the use of the elevator.

FIRST GRAND PRIZE MEANS $200 A WEEK

Principal Prizes of $2,000 Cash in Edmonton Bulletin Contest Will Be Return for Few Weeks' Work—$15,000 in Cash or Automobiles Will Be Divided Among Subscription Getters—Many Towns and Villages in Country Still Without a Candidate.

Two hundred dollars a week! Pretty good pay, isn't it? Two contestants in The Edmonton Bulletin $200 A Week Prize Contest, who win the two grand prizes, will have earned this amount.

The best of it is that only spare time is needed to win these prizes, or any of the other big cash prizes.

Nine people enrolled their names yesterday to compete for the cash prizes or nine automobiles. While this was not as many as expected, the fact that all the entrants are grown-up folks is especially promising.

The $15,000 worth of prizes is going to appeal to men and women in all walks of life is clearly demonstrated by the various occupations of the different candidates enrolled.

$2,000 each was the objective of a big percentage, while others expressed a willingness to earn the ten per cent commission.

The fact that there are two grand prizes of $2,000 each; two grand prizes of $1,000 each; two grand prizes of $500 each; two grand prizes of $200 each, making a big appeal to many, especially to those who are anxious to earn extra money at this particular time.

You cannot lose in this contest, for the smallest prize you can win is a cash commission of ten per cent.

Husbands are nominating their wives. Wives are nominating their husbands, making it a joint affair. Telephone directories are being checked and organization plans are being formulated for a systematic canvass.

"Kiddies" are watching for The Edmonton Bulletin every morning to clip out the 500-coupon, thus helping in their little way to pile up a sufficient vote to win one of the big prizes for the week.

The best part of the campaign is that everyone receives something. Those who do not win a prize will receive a cash commission of ten per cent on every dollar collected.

The prizes are so large and so numerous that men and women of all ages, and coming from all walks in life, will be able to find something appropriate and useful included in The Edmonton Bulletin Contest offer.

Those who have called at the office and met the Contest Manager have been free to express themselves about the campaign.

"I decided to try for one of the five prizes because I was impressed by the fairness of the offer," said an intelligent and aggressive young man who called yesterday. "I was impressed because there is no possible chance for unfair treatment, since votes are given on bona fide subscriptions. I take it that none of the members of the contest can act unfairly with the management or others. I am a business man and some of my friends thought that I did not have time to enter the fight. I replied that 'It is the busy person who comes in contact with the most people, and it takes but very little time to tell the campaign that to ask 'How is your health?' or complain about the weather."

"I am for one, to turn this to advantage. I do not know whether I will win one of the largest prizes or not, but the list of prizes is so long that I am sure I can get one of them."

Only one nomination blank is credited to a candidate. The 500 free coupon is published in the Contest advertisement every day, and will count 500 votes for the candidate whose name it bears. Candidates should hold all 500 free coupon and put them in parcels of 100 each. This will save both candidate and the contest staff a lot of extra work in counting same.

A candidate may have as many friends working for him as he can get. The more the better.

A firm of chartered accountants will be appointed by The Edmonton Bulletin to audit all records and votes, and it will be from their report that the winners will be announced. This insures fair treatment to all persons taking part in this competition.

Subscriptions will be accepted for a longer period than two years in Edmonton and three years in the country. The Contest has only been announced and will not get under way for at least another week. The winners of the two grand prizes in the last contest conducted by the Bulletin, delivered by carrier in Edmonton, counted 40,000 votes.

Our Children

By Angelo Patri

RESPONSIBILITY

"The great trouble with Archie is that he has no sense of responsibility. One time—he borrowed my new shoes, just for a few minutes to cut a string, and left them out on the grass all night. Just look at them. Ruined! No sense of responsibility."

"Archie, look at my shoes. See what you've done! Why in the world didn't you bring them back?"

"Oh, gee! I was coming in with them when you called to me to go over to the Wright's and tell Mrs. Wright that you wouldn't be over. Don't you remember? And I couldn't carry them in my hands so I laid them down and forgot them."

"Forgotten is your best friend! You get no more of my shoes. Mother wiped her shoes, indignation in every rub, and the great fallen Archie turned to see what she was doing."

"The side porch needs washing. Put on the hose and give it a good cleaning," mother called after him.

Archie obediently put on the hose and was washing away when he heard his mother call:

"Archie, Archie! I forgot to tell the butcher to bring that thing on the early delivery, and we must have them for lunch today and catch him before he gets to the corner."

Archie dropped his hose and flew across the lawn to catch the butcher. The hose lay where he dropped it, across the porch. His little sister Helen ran out to see where he was going so swiftly and fell over the hose and went head over heels into the bed of geraniums that had been there.

Archie returned panting. He had caught the butcher and was pleased with himself. "I sure can run, Mom! I caught him easy!"

"Yes, I suppose you did. And look at the rest of the job you did!"

"You left the hose lying across the porch and Helen fell over it and into the flowers and wrecked the place. You haven't the smallest sense of responsibility!"

"You told me to hurry! I couldn't stop to take off the hose. It wasn't my fault if Helen didn't see her eyes was in it!"

"And into the bargain you never saw her back! I don't know what it is going to be done with you, I'm sure. When your father comes home I shall tell him. Now finish the porch and come into the house and stay in."

Archie was angry. He felt that he had been treated very unjustly and he thought right. No child can develop a sense of responsibility unless there is some continuity to the job he has in hand. He must be allowed to plan and work and finish the thing he started upon if he is to feel responsible for it.

Constant interruptions, changing instructions, carrying out the work of unfinished work will teach a child that the end of the job does not matter. It does not lie in his hands.

You see the result of his work must be in his own hands if he is to sense responsibility. If you take it into your own to interfere or check or stonewall it altogether, the job has been your own. All the child gets was a disaster for work.
